Manager comment

The second quarter was met with a harsh decline of the markets as a result of Trump's unprecedented tariffs policy.

The markets touched “bear” correction territory but then showed a V-shape recovery as Trump postponed tariffs by 90-days.

Recently markets were also buoyed by a new ‘big, beautiful bill’ which provides fiscal relief to corporates and individuals, the bill is worth $4.5 trln in total, however, this is to the detriment of social programs and increases the already deficit budget.

This mounts fears of an inflationary spike and growing government debt as interest payments rise accordingly which pressures the debt markets and the dollar. Not surprisingly Trump is pushing the Fed chairman to cut the rate – a challenging move as a new deadline to introduce heightened tariffs set up on 1st August 2025.

Meanwhile the earnings season kicks with positive expectations on company's earnings and outlooks. Traditionally, the technology sector is in the lead.

We keep our positive outlook for the stock markets for 2025, and beyond, as while global trade relations are impacted by Trump's aggressive policy, we do not consider this factor as a long-lived one as trade partners show willingness to continue negotiations in the hope of securing a reduced rate.

Other long term positive tail winds are softer fiscal policy with looming easing of the monetary policy along with banking deregulation and good company earnings and AI development.
